A credit card payment operation in which the Cardholder saves and registers the card data provided during the registration transaction is called a recurring transaction, and thus the merchant can initiate further payments in the future without the Cardholder's active participation and without re-entering the credit card data. When saving the data (registration), the Cardholder consents to the completion of recurring credit card transaction(s).

The customer must update the registered data with the data of the renewed, replacement, activated card (CVV/CVC code, expiration date). From 04.25.2024, the Bank may authorize the repeated transaction in the case of a valid card identifier/card number, even if the Cardholder has not updated the card's card expiration date and CVV/CVC code after any card renewal, replacement, or activation.
